Contemporary Challenges for Urban Built Environment and Landscape Conservation: Social, Cultural and Economic Issues

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue welcomes articles dealing with the following:

- The existing criticalities or 'virtuous' elements in the relationship between territorial planning and conservation at the national and international levels;
- Innovative planning and decision-making approaches to heritage conservation at the urban and landscape scale;
- Heritage-driven or culture-driven approaches to urban and landscape regeneration;
- Participatory approaches to conservation issues and local community roles in heritage landscape planning and decision-making processes;
- Built heritage conservation's specificities and challenges in development and transformation processes related to different territorial contexts (urban landscape and rural landscape);
- The cultural, social, and economic dimension of built heritage reuse and landscape enhancement;
- Assessment and evaluation methodologies to support conservation decisions;
- The multi-dimensional value of cultural heritage assets and landscape.

We look forward to receiving your original research articles and reviews.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant impact factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years. I strongly recommend Land for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
