

Special Issue

Contribution of Trail Paths to the Protection and Promotion of the Natural Environment

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to present a collection of research reports on the development of human access to the natural environment and its impacts. This is consistent with the aims and scope of Land journal in dealing with land use and land use planning as well as land-related aspects of nature governance and of human–wildlife interactions, including synergies and conflicts. Suggested themes and article types include, but are not limited to:

- Land use change under human society development
- Ecotourism development and its influence on natural environment
- Land use policy in promoting the vitality of historical cities
- Management of the environment and natural resources
- Residents' perceptions on environmental sustainability and regional development

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant impact factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years. I strongly recommend Land for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
