Regenerative Landscapes: Designing with Ecological Connectivity and Habitat Use in Mind

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue invites contributions from scholars in landscape ecology, urban planning, landscape architecture, environmental humanities, and related disciplines. Submissions may address, among others, the following themes:

- Concepts and models of ecological connectivity;
- Regenerative landscape projects in cities—gardens, parks, and informal green spaces;
- Nature-based and climate-resilient planning within urban resilience frameworks;
- Land-use conflicts between habitat conservation, agricultural development, urbanization, and renewable energy;
- Connectivity for people and nature—linking ecological corridors with green infrastructure and recreation;
- Healthy soils and ecosystems, habitat restoration, and well-being;
- Community participation in connectivity projects (e.g., citizen science, participatory mapping);
- Hybrid landscapes and temporal connectivity—linking natural, agricultural, and urban spaces within connectivity networks.

We look forward to receiving your original research articles and reviews.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant Impact Factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years.
