This new collection in the Land journal contributes to the process of intensive knowledge and experience exchange among various experts and practitioners by offering an open platform where a discussion concerning integrated land management, planning, and policy making in the context of various European landscapes can take place. It is open to different types of theoretical analyses, research papers, and practical contributions addressing the overall topic of integrated management, planning, and policy making for sustainable landscape development in Europe. It also aims to collect submissions from European Land-Use Institute (ELI) members. As part of this collaboration, all members of ELI will receive a discount on the article processing charge (APC) when submitting articles to Land.
