The Use and Perception of Urban Green Space in the Wake of COVID-19

Message from the Guest Editors

Following the success of the Special Issue of Land on the "Effects of the COVID-19 Pandemic on the Use and Perception of Urban Green Space", we are happy to announce the opening of a second volume of this thematic Special Issue. The aim of this ongoing Special Issue is to collect further studies on how the need, perception and usage of green spaces have changed in the wake of the pandemic, and to shed light on how administrators and policy makers can confront the environmental, biological, and social threats that have arisen. It is our hope that by encouraging a communal discussion on the planning and management of urban green spaces, we can increase the resilience of both our cities and the natural environment on which they depend.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant impact factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years. I strongly recommend Land for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
