Land, Ageing, Gender and Environment: Problems and Challenges from Different Disciplines II

Message from the Guest Editors

Recent studies argue that we are facing a silent and relatively longstanding socio-environmental crisis. This is based on the evidence, and confirms the need to continue the evaluation and research in several key aspects of land, from different approaches and disciplines. That is, some research exists which is linked to land and gender, but there are fewer studies about older people and green societies. Therefore, the main aim of this Special Issue, in the context of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), is to bring together researchers from different fields and open a dialogue regarding some gaps of the land, including ageing and gender relationships. As a continuation of the last Special Issue on "Land, Ageing, Gender and Environment: Problems and Challenges from Different Disciplines", this second volume Special Issue is open to the submission of previously unpublished works on all aspects of the land.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant impact factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years. I strongly recommend Land for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
