

Special Issue

Land Tenure and Spatial Functions in the Living Conditions of People in a Global World

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue presents insights on experiences, theories, concepts, and practices on land tenure and spatial functions in the context of liveability around the world. We, therefore, invite conceptual, case studies, field research, and review articles focusing on (but not limited to) the following themes:

- Spatial planning issues in the context of urban, peri-urban, and rural areas;
- Land governance (encompassing land management, land administration, and land policy issues);
- Spatial planning (including physical planning, land use planning, town and country planning, or urban and regional planning);
- Property studies (embracing property valuation, real estate management, and facilities of management applications within the public and private sector);
- Application of land methods to societal issues (including the history of dispossession, gender concerns, environmental issues, health or well-being and social changes linked to behavioural problems related to land tenure security).

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Land is the only open access journal covering all aspects of land science, and it is a pioneering platform for publishing on land system science. Our editorial board is comprised of eminent scholars. We publish high quality research on societally relevant, emerging and innovative topics and results in land system research. It is now one of the top land journals with a significant impact factor, and has a goal to become the best journal in land in the coming years. I strongly recommend Land for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
