Message from the Guest Editors

In this Special Issue, we are interested in expanding the panorama of languages promoting research at the interface between linguistics and language pathologies with a theoretical focus and considering adult speakers with a language disorder. Both studies with adults with aphasia and other language disorders in adults will be considered with a preference for studies informed by theoretical approaches (see for example Druks,2017 seminal book on syntax and Arcara et al., 2020 approaches on pragmatics). Topics in any aspects of linguistics will be of interest as well as clinical studies based on theoretical models (Thompson and Shapiro, 2005), with no restriction of the theoretical approach adopted (usage-based, cognitive linguistics, generative grammar, …). The Guest Editors will contribute an editorial dedicated to the contribution of minoritized languages to research on language pathologies. We are sure that those who are willing to contribute to this volume will share with us the conviction that there is a need for more studies on multilingual speakers with language pathologies and speakers of under-represented languages.

Message from the Editorial Board

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is now in its eighth year since its inception in 2015. It is an Open Access journal which seeks to stimulate debates on key issues in languages and linguistics. We welcome papers at the cutting edge of different fields, ranging from applied linguistics to descriptive and theoretical linguistics. Submissions may consist of research articles and critical reviews as well as proposals for Special Issues where multi-disciplinary approaches and different perspectives on current issues are explored. We invite you to consider Languages as a forum for sharing your work.
