Acoustic-Phonetics in Phonology

Message from the Guest Editor

The goal of this Special Issue is to bring together a variety of research working within the broader exegetical framework of acoustic contributions to phonological patterning both within/across languages and individuals. How might the acoustic peculiarities of phonetic contrasts contribute to their realization in phonologies, their acquisition, or variation and change? We invite research that either supplements or challenges any of these issues from either synchronic or diachronic positions, with data from understudied languages being particularly welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is now in its eighth year since its inception in 2015. It is an Open Access journal which seeks to stimulate debates on key issues in languages and linguistics. We welcome papers at the cutting edge of different fields, ranging from applied linguistics to descriptive and theoretical linguistics. Submissions may consist of research articles and critical reviews as well as proposals for Special Issues where multi-disciplinary approaches and different perspectives on current issues are explored. We invite you to consider Languages as a forum for sharing your work.
