Special Issue

Promoting Cross-Cultural Communication in Digital and Non-digital Environments: Language and Intercultural Interaction

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to offer an updated view of how languages and cultures are inextricably connected within the digital (for some of us) and non-digital (for some others) society of information, so language teaching and learning in the 21st century must unavoidably be enriched by such interaction. We strongly encourage interested scholars and researchers to contribute to this Special Issue, submitting a paper on new ways to teach language from the culture and culture from language (within both digital and non-digital contexts), on how language is impacted by culture, on how culture evolves at the same pace that language does, among others. Contributions addressing these topics will be prioritized.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is now in its eighth year since its inception in 2015. It is an Open Access journal which seeks to stimulate debates on key issues in languages and linguistics. We welcome papers at the cutting edge of different fields, ranging from applied linguistics to descriptive and theoretical linguistics. Submissions may consist of research articles and critical reviews as well as proposals for Special Issues where multi-disciplinary approaches and different perspectives on current issues are explored. We invite you to consider Languages as a forum for sharing your work.
