Special Issue

Tense and Aspect Across Languages

Message from the Guest Editors

We welcome contrastive and comparative analyses of languages or language varieties in a synchronic or diachronic perspective. Topics include, but are not restricted to:

- Foundational issues, such as what we can infer from parallel corpora for tense and aspect across languages, how we should address the limitations that parallel corpus research brings along, and how corpora and psycholinguistic experiments complement each other.
- Dimensions of synchronic and diachronic variation, such as what we can learn from the investigation of micro-variation (language varieties/language time slices) for meso- and macro-variation of tense and aspect, as well as language change.
- Case studies on specific tense or aspect categories, in a particular set of languages/language varieties/language slices/language families and their impact on linguistic theory.
- Tense-oriented vs. aspect-oriented languages and how their comparison can advance linguistic theory.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is now in its eighth year since its inception in 2015. It is an Open Access journal which seeks to stimulate debates on key issues in languages and linguistics. We welcome papers at the cutting edge of different fields, ranging from applied linguistics to descriptive and theoretical linguistics. Submissions may consist of research articles and critical reviews as well as proposals for Special Issues where multi-disciplinary approaches and different perspectives on current issues are explored. We invite you to consider Languages as a forum for sharing your work.
