The Syntax-Prosody Interface in East Asian Languages

Message from the Guest Editor

The journal Languages is accepting submissions for a Special Issue regarding the syntax-prosody interface with a particular focus on East Asian languages. We aim to highlight both cutting-edge work regarding a current issue in linguistics and the contribution of research on often-marginalized languages to the shaping of general linguistic theory. We welcome submissions from any discipline within the broader ambit of linguistics, i.e., those that primarily situate themselves within syntax, semantics, pragmatics, morphology, phonology, and phonetics, as well as interdisciplinary contributions from areas such as psycholinguistics, neurolinguistics, computational linguistics, and language processing which clearly highlight theoretical consequences of the formal study of East Asian languages. We would like to emphasize that, alongside more theoretically oriented work, empirical contributions are also encouraged.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Languages (ISSN 2226-471X) is now in its eighth year since its inception in 2015. It is an Open Access journal which seeks to stimulate debates on key issues in languages and linguistics. We welcome papers at the cutting edge of different fields, ranging from applied linguistics to descriptive and theoretical linguistics. Submissions may consist of research articles and critical reviews as well as proposals for Special Issues where multi-disciplinary approaches and different perspectives on current issues are explored. We invite you to consider Languages as a forum for sharing your work.
