Regulating Mental Health: Crossing the Rubicon between Care and Control

Message from the Guest Editor

The aim of this Special Issue is to bring together the existing and emerging body of research in mental health law, with a key focus on the legislative frameworks currently in place in the author's given jurisdiction. This milieu of change in mental health, in terms of governance, attitudinal shifts, and a stronger mental health 'voice', sets the stage for this Special Issue which will introduce papers that explore a range of issues relating to mental health, the legislative frameworks governing mental health care provision and reform: covering national, European, and international perspectives.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
