Concerns, Contradictions and Reality of Mental Health Law

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on the concerns, contradictions and reality of mental health law, including the relationship between the CRPD and mental health law. What are the key concerns facing mental health law? How do these relate to mental health and criminal justice systems? Are there irresolvable contradictions? Are there basic issues that have been overlooked in past debates? How does mental health law and mental health law reform play in the practical context? How does mental health law relate to human rights? What is the way forward?

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
