Special Issue

Law and Gender Justice

Message from the Guest Editors

The tumultuous relationship between law and gender justice is historically, culturally, and discursively produced. Deeply embedded in the hegemonic masculine legal framework, the interaction between law and gender must seek refuge in a moral-juridical-just discourse. Punitive and exculpatory, disempowering and empowering, exclusionary and inclusive, all at the same time, the relation between law and gender justice must be grounded in the principles of equality, autonomy, protection from harm, and a gender-just framework. In this Special Issue, we invite gender inclusive theoretical, empirical, and lived experience submissions that address law's relationship with gender justice/injustice in the following areas:

- Gender-based violence;
- Bodily integrity and sexual autonomy;
- The criminal justice system;
- The workplace;
- The health care system.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
