

Special Issue

Police Corruption Prevention in Post-Conflict Societies

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue's central focus is on anticorruption strategy and legal policy reform toward combating and preventing police corruption in post-conflict societies. We invite submissions from a diverse set of contributors to examine the following:

- Both the problems that police corruption brings in a variety of post-conflict societies and the legal efforts to curtail police corruption in volatile settings.
- What are the causes and consequences of police corruption in post-conflict societies and states undergoing current armed conflict?
- What pre-existing strategies have been put in place to prevent and fight police corruption in post-conflict societies?
- What lessons can be learned regarding the viability of contemporary anticorruption strategy and legal policy reform?
- What recommendations can be provided to establish greater cohesion and efforts to prevent police corruption in post-conflict societies?
- What is the role of the international donor community and external stakeholders?
- Should local ownership of anticorruption strategy be encouraged to prevent police corruption?

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
