Message from the Guest Editors

Podiatry is the emerging branch of medicine that specializes in the treatment of foot, ankle, and leg conditions. Podiatry is practiced as a health specialty in different countries and podiatrists are college graduates with competencies in the diagnosis and treatment of foot and ankle disorders. Despite the high prevalence of foot problems, this anatomical region has not received special attention in the past, and only over the last century have medicine and surgery begun to focus on foot and ankle disorders. Currently, knowledge in this field is still rapidly expanding and multidisciplinary approaches to foot problems are still being improved via the development of entirely new treatments and optimization of existing methods. This progress can be seen in both conservative and surgical treatments, as well as in public health aspects such as diagnosis and prevention.

We are pleased to announce the launch of the section edition of this Special Issue, entitled “New Insights into Podiatry.” We encourage professionals and researchers interested in foot and ankle, and lower leg problems to submit reviews and original research articles that fit into this field.
