Message from the Guest Editors

In this Life Special Issue, we would like to put the focus on the singularities of cyanobacteria, with an emphasis on the study of a) biological processes or cell components that are either unique to cyanobacteria or oxygenic photosynthetic organisms, and b) differential aspects on the regulation of all basic and common processes, including the gene expression machinery.

Therefore, we welcome studies, both original and review articles, which contribute to a) a better understanding of cyanobacterial processes that are of evolutionary and ecological importance, and b) show the need and promote the use of suitable cyanobacterial model systems for the advancement of basic knowledge and biotechnological applications.
