Prevention and Control of Post-Radiotherapy Complications in Head and Neck Cancer

Message from the Guest Editor

Radiotherapy is a cornerstone in the management of head and neck cancers, yet it frequently leads to acute and chronic complications that significantly impact patients' quality of life, functional outcomes, and long-term survivorship. This Special Issue, "Prevention and Control of Post-Radiotherapy Complications in Head and Neck Cancer," aims to provide comprehensive information for advancing scientific and clinical knowledge on mitigating these adverse effects. Given the rapid advances in imaging technologies, intraoperative monitoring, biomaterials, regenerative medicine, and AI-driven prediction models, this Special Issue seeks to highlight multidisciplinary solutions that bridge oncology, surgery, radiology, radiation oncology, and biomedical engineering. By gathering cutting-edge evidence and expert insights, this Special Issue aims to inform clinical practice, guide future research directions, and ultimately improve outcomes for patients suffering from post-radiotherapy complications in head and neck cancer.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Life (ISSN 2075-1729) is an international, peer-reviewed open access journal that publishes scientific studies related to fundamental themes in life sciences. Some papers are published individually, while others are submitted for inclusion in special issues with guest editors. You are invited to contribute a research article, essay, or a review to be considered for publication.

Editor-in-Chief
