Thyroid and Parathyroid Diseases: Advances in Molecular Imaging

Message from the Guest Editors

Thyroid and parathyroid disorders affect millions of people worldwide, yet accurate diagnosis and personalized treatment remain challenging due to the complex heterogeneity of these conditions. Advancements in radiopharmaceutical chemistry, hybrid imaging, and AI-driven analytics are improving endocrine diagnostics. For specialists handling thyroid and parathyroid diseases, whether diagnosing, planning surgery, guiding therapy, analyzing specimens, or delivering targeted treatments, this Special Issue brings together the frontiers of innovation, with real clinical relevance. We invite high-quality submissions in the following areas of interest: Molecular Tracers and Biomarkers, State-of-the-Art Imaging Modalities, PET/CT and PET/MRI enhancements for superior lesion detection, AI and Radiomics, Theranostics and Personalized Treatment. This Special Issue welcomes a wide range of article types, and we particularly encourage submissions of original research, systematic reviews, and meta-analyses.
