Common and Novel Markers of Inflammation and Tissue Damage in Various Pathological Conditions—2nd Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

We are grateful to the many researchers who contributed to the success of the first volume of this Special Issue

(https://www.mdpi.com/journal/life/special_issues/Z1374P2U2X). We are very pleased to announce the second volume. Inflammation is a complex and necessary component of the response to pathological conditions, which has been linked to numerous diseases.

Inflammatory responses involve the release of various inflammatory markers. The evaluation of biomarkers allows us to understand the progression of various disorders and tissue repair processes. Monitoring the levels of inflammatory markers in body fluids may be useful for diagnosing inflammation as well as monitoring disease treatment. The most frequently used inflammatory markers include acute-phase proteins and cytokines. However, new inflammatory response and tissue damage markers that can provide valuable information about various pathological conditions are still being sought. All articles presenting valuable observations concerning common and novel markers of inflammation and tissue damage in various pathological conditions are welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Life (ISSN 2075-1729) is an international, peer-reviewed open access journal that publishes scientific studies related to fundamental themes in life sciences. Some papers are published individually, while others are submitted for inclusion in special issues with guest editors. You are invited to contribute a research article, essay, or a review to be considered for publication.
