Advances in Novel Biomarkers and Emerging Immune/Targeted Therapies in Solid Tumors

Message from the Guest Editors

Our Special Issue, “Advances in Novel Biomarkers and Emerging Immune/Targeted Therapies in Solid Tumors”, guest-edited by and , aims to gather groundbreaking research and reviews that enhance our understanding of the molecular mechanisms driving solid tumors and explore the clinical applications of targeted and immunotherapies. We encourage submissions covering a broad spectrum—from well-established molecular targets and emerging biomarkers to innovative treatment strategies. Topics of particular interest include overcoming acquired resistance to therapies, managing the side effects of these new treatments, integrating molecular therapies into existing treatment regimens, the role of pathological evaluation in optimizing therapies, and using tissue- and blood-based biomarkers for therapy selection and response monitoring.

We invite submissions from various disciplines, including molecular biology, pathology, pharmacology, and clinical oncology, to comprehensively collect the latest insights, aiming to enhance patient outcomes and guide future research in this rapidly evolving field.
