Roles of Diabetes in Cardiovascular Disorders and Nephropathy

Message from the Guest Editors

Cardiovascular diseases and chronic kidney damages are the major risk factors associated with diabetes. Articles focused on the pathophysiology of heart and kidney diseases and/or their synergistic effects during diabetes are welcome in this Special Issue. To publish original research, review articles and commentaries on the below topics:

- the role of diabetes in cardiovascular diseases and nephropathy: include specific cellular signaling pathways, treatment approaches, and phytochemicals used for the adverse effects of the disease;
- mitochondrial bioenergetics in diabetic cardiomyopathies and nephropathies;
- endoplasmic reticulum stress in the progression of in diabetic cardiomyopathies and nephropathies;
- the effect of oxidative stress on post-translational modifications regulating diabetic cardiovascular disorders and nephropathy;
- membrane protein/transporter protein regulation during diabetic heart and kidney diseases;
- plant products/bioactive compounds regulating the cellular mechanisms during diabetic cardiomyopathy and/or nephropathy.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Life (ISSN 2075-1729) is an international, peer-reviewed open access journal that publishes scientific studies related to fundamental themes in life sciences. Some papers are published individually, while others are submitted for inclusion in special issues with guest editors. You are invited to contribute a research article, essay, or a review to be considered for publication.
