

Special Issue

Early Career Stars in Cell Biology and Tissue Engineering

Message from the Guest Editor

Tissue engineering is an important area in regenerative medicine to provide patients with functional cells, cell assemblies, or even organoids to address age- or disease-related dysfunctions. Whether reprogramming stem cells or maintaining tissue cells in a differentiated state, the challenges lie in the technological implementation of the biological requirements. Either new biomaterials, media, and cultivation conditions are developed for a specific application or success emerges only after the biological background has been explored. Very often, high-caliber young researchers are the driving force of such crystallization points of translational science—inspired by curiosity and challenges; they will be highlighted in this issue.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Life (ISSN 2075-1729) is an international, peer-reviewed open access journal that publishes scientific studies related to fundamental themes in life sciences. Some papers are published individually, while others are submitted for inclusion in special issues with guest editors. You are invited to contribute a research article, essay, or a review to be considered for publication.

Author Benefits

Open Access:

free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility:

indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, CAPIus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank:

JCR - Q1 (Biology) / CiteScore - Q1 (Paleontology)
