Pediatric Nutrition for a Healthy Life

Message from the Guest Editors

Pediatric nutrition is a crucial pitfall in an individual's life due to the rapid changes in nutritional requirements and the consequent impact on infant growth and development, but also regarding lifelong taste preference and dietary habits, which influence mid- and long-term health. There is an increasing body of evidence addressing the pivotal role of nutrition, especially during the early stages of life, for the onset of chronic non-communicable diseases such as obesity, hypertension, diabetes, and allergic diseases. The aim of this Special issue is to discuss the effects of composition and mode of nutrition in pediatric age on mid- and long-term health outcomes.
