Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Food waste refers to produce discarded by end-consumers, unlike food loss, which occurs during production, post-harvest, and processing. End-consumers include not only households but also small restaurateurs and fast-food retailers.

This Special Issue seeks to explore innovative strategies, technologies, and practices to significantly reduce food waste across the supply chain, positively impacting consumers, communities, and society. We invite high-quality research papers, case studies showcasing successful initiatives, and review articles that provide insights into the challenges and solutions for minimizing food waste and loss from production to consumption.

Deadline for manuscript submissions:

1 November 2025
