

Special Issue

Investment, Risk, and Sustainability in Maritime Logistics and Supply Chain

Message from the Guest Editors

The evolving international seaborne trade patterns, technological advances, environmental regulations, geopolitical events, and changes in consumers' taste and behavior have presented significant challenges, as well as opportunities, in the maritime industry in recent years. At the same time, theoretical and applied research on different aspects of the international supply chain, maritime business, and the shipping industry has been instrumental for the industry to expand, adapt, and become more resilient. The annual International Association of Maritime Economists conference has been the premier platform for academics, policymakers, and industry professionals to present and discuss cutting-edge research in maritime economics, international shipping, and logistics. This year, the Logistics journal is inviting submissions of research papers presented in the IAME conference for consideration in a Special Issue of Logistics. This Special Issue will focus on topics related to recent developments in maritime business, international shipping, and sustainability in global supply chains.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I am delighted to take on the editorial role for the open-access international journal Logistics, which will emphasize current important issues in logistics and supply chain management. My aim is to ensure that this journal employs a rapid review process; has the flexibility to address the most current topics; and is globally connected, communicating online peer-reviewed articles and related content to a worldwide audience. I have invited a group of leading thinkers to serve as Editorial Review Board Members, who will promote cutting-edge insights from authors from all over the world. Contemporary topics that address current challenges will receive special attention, as will thought-provoking scholarly essays and viewpoints. On behalf of our distinguished Editorial Board, I welcome your contributions.
