

Special Issue

Risk Management in Supply Chain Management - Collaboration and Behavior

Message from the Guest Editor

Given recent global supply chain challenges, this Special Issue seeks to expand the body of knowledge on behavioral supply chain risk management, especially in relation to collaborative risk management. Authors are cordially invited to submit original research papers, empirical studies, and case studies for the Special Issue of Logistics until November 30, 2021. Manuscripts may be submitted that relate to the following topics:

- Resource dependence risk;
- Cognitive risks in supply decisions;
- Intuition, expertise, and judgment models;
- Impact on collaborative risk management for differentiated risk types;
- Supply chain risk collaboration in widespread crisis situations;
- Challenges to realizing effective and efficient collaborative risk management;
- Application of theories in the exploration of supply chain collaboration and associated behaviors;
- Studies involving collaborative risk management capabilities.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I am delighted to take on the editorial role for the open-access international journal Logistics, which will emphasize current important issues in logistics and supply chain management. My aim is to ensure that this journal employs a rapid review process; has the flexibility to address the most current topics; and is globally connected, communicating online peer-reviewed articles and related content to a worldwide audience. I have invited a group of leading thinkers to serve as Editorial Review Board Members, who will promote cutting-edge insights from authors from all over the world. Contemporary topics that address current challenges will receive special attention, as will thought-provoking scholarly essays and viewpoints. On behalf of our distinguished Editorial Board, I welcome your contributions.
