

Special Issue

Synthesis of Marine Natural Products

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Marine Drugs entitled “Synthesis of Marine Natural Products” will discuss the chemistry involved in the synthesis of biologically active marine compounds such as fatty acids, amino acids, polyamines, or phenol derivatives, and why marine animals and plants elaborate any distinct kinds of molecules. The structure–activity relationships of these marine molecules will be also examined in order to demonstrate the wide interest of chemists in mimicking Nature. Finally, this Issue is intended for chemists with an interest in the marine environment as well as oceanographers, marine biologists, marine scientists, and pharmacologists.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

During the past few decades there has been an ever increasing number of novel compounds discovered in the marine environment. This is exemplified by the robust preclinical and clinical pipeline that currently exists for marine natural products. Marine Drugs is inviting contributions on new advances in marine biotechnology, pharmacology, chemical ecology, synthetic biology, and genomics approaches related to the discovery of therapeutically relevant marine natural products. Our goal is to share your contribution in a timely fashion and in a manner that will be valued by the scientific community.
