Advances in Oral Implants and Alveolar Bone Regeneration

Message from the Guest Editor

There is growing interest in oral implantology as well as in bone regeneration for implant purposes. Many approaches and protocols have changed during the last years. As an example, 3D technologies have influenced and improved the classical workflow and also positively changed bone regeneration procedures. The aim of this Special Issue is to collect articles and studies about new approaches and technologies for oral implantology and implant-supported prosthesis.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Materials (ISSN 1996-1944) was launched in 2008. The journal covers twenty-five comprehensive topics: biomaterials, energy materials, advanced composites, advanced materials characterization, porous materials, manufacturing processes and systems, advanced nanomaterials and nanotechnology, smart materials, thin films and interfaces, catalytic materials, carbon materials, materials chemistry, materials physics, optics and photonics, corrosion, construction and building materials, materials simulation and design, electronic materials, advanced and functional ceramics and glasses, metals and alloys, soft matter, polymeric materials, quantum materials, mechanics of materials, green materials, general. Materials provides a unique opportunity to contribute high quality articles and to take advantage of its large readership.
