Message from the Guest Editors

The SARS-CoV-2 pandemic has placed a great burden on healthcare systems around the world, causing significant mortality and morbidity. Nowadays, two years after the onset of the pandemic, there are still large numbers of patients dying from this disease, and even more suffering short- and long-term consequences, affecting almost all organs and systems.

In this Special Issue, we aim to gather original articles, reviews or case reports with an emphasis on the burden of the COVID-19 pandemic on mental health. We also welcome articles that consider ethical, social and psychological issues relevant to the field of mental health during the COVID-19 pandemic.
