New Regenerative Medicine Strategies in Oral Surgery

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will explore the latest research and clinical advancements in the field of oral regenerative surgery, highlighting new technologies and treatment modalities designed to enhance tissue regeneration, minimize patient morbidity, and reduce the need for grafting or prosthetic interventions. Possible topics include advances in 3D bioprinting, the use of scaffold materials and biologically active molecules, the role of stem cells in tissue regeneration, and the integration of regenerative techniques into complex reconstructive procedures. We will also address the emerging role of personalized medicine and regenerative approaches in addressing challenging conditions such as severe periodontitis, traumatic injuries, and congenital defects. The ultimate goal of these innovations is to improve long-term outcomes and quality of life for patients, underscoring the importance of interdisciplinary collaboration between clinicians, researchers, and engineers in pushing the boundaries of oral surgery.
