Latest Findings and Clinical Advances in Pediatric Dentistry

Message from the Guest Editor

The field of paediatric dentistry has undergone significant advances in recent years, marked by a growing emphasis on innovative, minimally invasive and biologically based approaches to improving the long-term oral health of children and adolescents. We are witnessing a surge of advances in various areas of paediatric dentistry, including preventive measures, the management of caries, MIH and dental trauma, behavioural management and pulp treatment. This Special Issue aims to present the latest findings and innovations in the dental care of children. This Special Issue aims to collect contributions from all aspects related to the latest findings and clinical advances in pediatric dentistry. Authors engaged in research on the following subjects are encouraged to contribute original research articles, including clinical trials, cohort studies, cross-sectional studies, reviews, etc.

- Minimally invasive dentistry;
- Management and epidemiological research of caries, MIH and dental trauma
- Innovative management approaches in pediatric dentistry;
- New technologies for pediatric dental practice;
- Translational research.
