Uveitis: From Basic Research to Clinical Practice

Message from the Guest Editors

Uveitis is a worldwide eye disease that afflicts 12–15 cases per 100,000 of the population per year, causing 1–15% cases of blindness in the population. Diagnosis is not always straightforward, nor is management and treatment. It often involves other clinicians, such as rheumatologists, immunologists, infectivologists, internists, nephrologists, neurologists, neuroradiologists, geneticists, and microbiologists, as it can be related to systemic diseases. Therefore, we aim to channel all research that can make a substantial contribution to the management of these conditions in clinical practice into this Issue. The kind of papers that we will include narrative reviews, scoping reviews, systematic reviews with meta-analysis, and original research articles.
