Special Issue

Insights and Advances in Cancer Biomarkers

Message from the Guest Editor

Medicina is launching a Special Issue titled "Insights and Advances in Cancer Biomarkers". This Special Issue aims to comprehensively explore the intricate connections between cancer initiation, progression, chemotherapy resistance, and cancer recurrence, which significantly impact clinical practice and public health. Researchers and colleagues are cordially invited to contribute original research articles addressing novel approaches in cancer research. Submissions covering basic to clinical research are encouraged, particularly those focused on identifying new biomarkers and applying novel technologies, including multiomics and generative AI, to develop noninvasive tools for rapid diagnosis and therapeutic development. Additionally, review articles summarizing recent advancements in cancer biomarker research are welcome, with the goal of developing novel diagnostic methods and therapeutics for cancer treatment. Let us work together to advance our understanding and management of these critical health challenges.
