Recent Advances in Lower Urinary Tract Symptoms and Benign Prostatic Hyperplasia

Message from the Guest Editors

In recent years, significant progress has been made in understanding the pathophysiology, progression, and optimal therapeutic approaches for Lower Urinary Tract Symptoms and Benign Prostatic Hyperplasia.

Innovations in medical technology, imaging, minimally invasive procedures, and pharmacological therapies are transforming the standard of care. Furthermore, the integration of artificial intelligence, molecular biomarkers, and personalized medicine is paving the way for more accurate diagnosis and targeted treatment strategies. This Special Issue aims to showcase original research articles, comprehensive reviews, and clinical studies that highlight these cutting-edge developments. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Advances in diagnostic tools and imaging techniques for LUTS or BPH;
- Novel pharmacologic and surgical treatments;
- Role of biomarkers and genetics in disease stratification;
- Impact of lifestyle and comorbidities on LUTS or BPH progression;
- Minimally invasive and robotic interventions;
- AI and digital health tools in urology practice.

We warmly welcome your contributions.
