Diagnosis and Treatment of Urologic Oncology

Message from the Guest Editors

Over the past few decades, research has moved from focusing solely on survival to also considering quality of life, leading to the development of less invasive treatments and personalized medicine approaches. This Special Issue will present a comprehensive collection of the latest research and reviews on the diagnosis and treatment of urologic oncology. It will cover a broad spectrum of advancements in this field, from early detection and screening strategies to novel therapeutic approaches and multidisciplinary management of advanced and metastatic urologic cancers. This Special Issue's scope includes, but is not limited to, cutting-edge diagnostic technologies, innovative surgical techniques, targeted therapies, the role of precision medicine, and the impacts of these advancements on patient outcomes. We are soliciting a wide range of papers that contribute to our understanding and the advancement of urologic oncology. These include, but are not limited to, original research articles, review articles, and technical notes with descriptions of new surgical techniques or innovations in diagnostic technologies.
