Fiber-Optic Sensors for Biomedical Applications

Message from the Guest Editor

Fiber-optic sensors have been rapidly developed in recent decades. Thanks to their compact size, good chemical resistance, and immunity to electromagnetic interference, fiber-optic sensors have been widely used in various areas. Many more novel sensors have been invented and developed and could have a large impact in society. This Special Issue seeks reviews, regular research papers and short communications on: (i) new approaches to fabricate fiber-optic sensors, (ii) novel optical methods to measure biomedical properties, and (iii) innovative use of existing fiber-optic sensors in biomedical applications.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

You are invited to contribute research articles or comprehensive reviews for consideration and publication in Micromachines (ISSN 2072-666X). Micromachines is published in the open access format. Research articles, reviews and other contents are released on the internet immediately after acceptance. The scientific community and the general public have unlimited free access to the content as soon as it is published. As an open access journal, Micromachines is supported by the authors or their institutes by payment of article processing charges (APC) for accepted papers. We are pleased to welcome you as our authors.

Author Benefits

High Visibility:

indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, Ei Compendex, dblp, and other databases.

Journal Rank:

JCR - Q2 (Instruments and Instrumentation) / CiteScore - Q1 (Mechanical Engineering)

Rapid Publication:

manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 17.2 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 1.9 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the first half of 2025).
