Message from the Guest Editors

The negative close relationship between environmental pollution and human and wildlife health is increasingly and dramatically evident, and the role of pollution biomarkers as a tool for measurement of the biological response to exposure to chemical contaminants is well established. In this context, the Special Issue solicits the submission of original research and review articles on the effects of pollutants at different levels of biological organization, using also different analytical methods (e.g., liquid chromatography (LC), gas chromatography (GC) and mass spectrometry (MS)) to measure biomarkers of exposure, of effect and susceptibility, for human and wildlife health risk assessment.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the premier open access journal dedicated to experimental organic chemistry, and now in its 25th year of publication, the papers published in Molecules span from classical synthetic methodology to natural product isolation and characterization, as well as physicochemical studies and the applications of these molecules as pharmaceuticals, catalysts and novel materials. Pushing the boundaries of the discipline, we invite papers on multidisciplinary topics bridging biochemistry, biophysics and materials science, as well as timely reviews and topical issues on cutting edge fields in all these areas.
