Nutrition Interventions in Low-Income Groups

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to seek to address the nutritional challenges (e.g. poor nutrition, obesity, and associated health problems) faced by the low-income group. To tackle these challenges, this Special Issue invites original research on a broad range of interventions, including but not limited to micronutrient biofortification, promotion of the intake of animal source foods (ASF), social protection, food assistance programs, nutrition education, micronutrient supplementation, food fortification, water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH) interventions, and maternal and child nutrition programs. The ultimate goal of this Special Issue is to develop effective, sustainable, and cost-effective interventions that could be scaled up across different settings. We invite researchers, practitioners, and policymakers to submit their work to this Special Issue of Nutrients.
