Nutritional Influences on Cognitive Function and Neurodevelopment Across the Lifespan

Message from the Guest Editors

As you certainly know, the intricate relationship between nutrition and brain health has become an increasingly important area of research. For this reason, we are pleased to invite you to contribute to our upcoming Special Issue, "Nutritional Influences on Cognitive Function and Neurodevelopment Across the Lifespan", in the Nutrients journal. This Special Issue aims to explore the critical role of nutrition in shaping cognitive function and neurodevelopment throughout all stages of life. We encourage the submission of original research articles, reviews, and meta-analyses. Potential topics include but are not limited to nutritional influences on fetal brain development and early childhood cognition, dietary patterns and their long-term effects on brain health, the gut microbiome and its relation to cognitive function, or dietary interventions for preventing or mitigating age-related cognitive decline. We look forward to hearing your response and reviewing your submissions in the near future.
