

Special Issue

Nutrition and Parkinson's Disease

Message from the Guest Editor

Modern lifestyles are characterized by unbalanced compositions of diets and insufficient physical activity, accompanied by environmental pollutants. These have resulted in dramatic increases in the rates of age-related diseases characterized by chronic, sterile, systemic low-grade inflammation. Among them, Parkinson's disease (PD), the second most common neurodegenerative disease after Alzheimer's disease, is characterized by the loss of dopaminergic neurons of the substantia nigra pars compacta and the accumulation of alpha-synuclein inclusion bodies in the brain. In this Special Issue of Nutrients, we would like to invite papers dealing with the topic of "Nutrition and Parkinson's Disease". The topics may include microbiota modification, altered micronutrient and nutrient intakes, pollution and lifestyle in the progression of Parkinson's disease, including preclinical and clinical studies.
