Bioactive Ingredients in Plants Related to Human Health

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, entitled “Bioactive Ingredients in Plants Related to Human Health”, will explore the impact of natural products, which originate from plants, on human wellness. Plants contain secondary metabolites that are very specific and represent a fascinating library of bioactive compounds with a broad activity in the context of human health. As society strives to transition towards more sustainable development pathways, it is important to investigate the link between biodiversity, nutritional status and human well-being. Nutrients, supplements and herbal bioactive compounds have shown promise as complementary tools in the treatment and prevention of chronic Non-Communicable Diseases (NCDs), such as obesity, type II diabetes, cancer, cardiovascular diseases and neurodegenerative diseases. Consistent with the journal Nutrients, we welcome original research articles, reviews and commentaries, aiming at elucidating the role of nutrients, supplements and herbal compounds in counteracting pathogenetic factors inducing NCDs, with a special emphasis on disease prevention.
