Nutritional Challenge in Advanced Chronic Liver Disease and Complications Related to Portal Hypertension

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to explore the latest and future challenges in nutritional investigation and insights that hepatologists should consider when addressing patients with advanced chronic liver disease (ACLD) based on liver disease etiology, the stage of liver cirrhosis and its portal hypertension development-related complications. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to, the following: Evaluation of the nutritional status and management of patients listed for orthotopic liver transplantation. Role of bariatric surgery in obese patients listed for orthotopic liver transplantation before, during and after. Branched-chain amino acids (BCAA) in compensated and decompensated advanced chronic liver disease (ACLD). Commercial diets, meal replacements and newly intermittent fasting diets: applicability and evidence in patients with chronic liver diseases. The role of vitamin D deficit and supplementation in chronic liver diseases. Late evening snacks in patients with ACLD. Original contributions, epidemiological studies, narrative and systematic reviews and meta-analyses are all welcome.
