Nutritional Assessment and Chronic Disease

Message from the Guest Editor

For this Special Issue on “Nutrition Assessment and Chronic Disease”, we seek articles (i.e., research papers, short communications, reviews, and meta-analyses) from academia and clinical settings that address the important themes related to effective nutritional assessment for identifying, treating, and/or attenuating chronic disease, such as:

- Identifying gold standards for subjective and objective data points;
- Developing best practices for obtaining feedback on the selection interventions;
- Identify research gaps in relation to nutritional assessment and chronic disease;

Effective ways to train future clinicians (undergraduate and graduate students, current clinicians) on how to critically think through and complete a nutritional assessment.
