Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Heterocyclic systems represent a privileged scaffold in Medicinal Chemistry, as they are present in the majority of organic compounds exhibiting important and diverse biological activities.

New biological targets and new emergent diseases are constantly being discovered, and at the same time, heterocyclic-based compounds are found in more than 90% of novel drugs, with new anti-COVID-19 authorized drugs representing a clear example of heterocyclic-based drugs. In this context, heterocyclic chemistry and heterocyclic-based drugs need to be continuously designed and developed.

The main goal of this Special Issue is to bring together research from experts in this field, and we are inviting you to contribute to this Special Issue articles, perspectives, and reviews covering all new aspects related to the design, identification and access, molecular characterization, development, and pharmacological evaluation of new active heterocyclic systems.

We look forward to your valuable contribution.
