Message from the Guest Editors

In recent years, there have been extensive studies in the area of medicinal plant research dealing with their various pharmacological effects. Novel research on this subject is necessary, since this is a hot topic field.

This thematic issue will cover the biological activity of medicinal plants and isolated compounds. Screening natural preparations for their biological activities is of prime importance, since natural raw material presents an excellent source of pharmaceuticals with a wide variety of different biologically active chemical structures. If your manuscript includes plant mixtures, please do check the following:
