Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The processes of solubilization and controlled release of drugs that are not very soluble in water are of great relevance to the pre-formulation of drugs in pharmaceutical developments. This Special Issue is dedicated to the latest advances in solubilization and controlled release processes for poorly soluble drugs. We invite authors to submit original research or review articles on these topics, including the development of novel solubilization strategies, as well as innovative alternative methods to obtain new controlled-release pharmaceutical forms, suitable for a specific patient and the pathology to be treated, without forgetting the best form of administration to obtain the optimal efficacy and safety of the drugs.
