Biological Properties of Nanostructures Incorporated in Polymeric Matrices

Message from the Guest Editor

The integration of nanostructures into polymeric matrices represents a rapidly advancing frontier in pharmaceutical and biomedical sciences. These hybrid systems offer unique advantages for improving therapeutic efficacy, enhancing biocompatibility, and enabling controlled and targeted delivery. This Special Issue of Pharmaceuticals invites high-quality original research articles, reviews, and short communications that address recent advances and emerging strategies in the design, characterization, and biological evaluation of nanostructure–polymer composites. We particularly welcome interdisciplinary contributions that focus on the interactions of such systems with biological environments, their functional performance, and their potential for clinical translation.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Because of your expertise in the field of drug sciences, I kindly invite you to consider publishing your current work, in the form of a research article or a review, in the open access electronic journal Pharmaceuticals.

Pharmaceuticals is characterized by an active editorial board and a dynamic editorial staff. Manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a final decision is provided to authors within 4–6 weeks after submission. Papers are published on the web immediately after acceptance. For details on the submission process or any other matter, please do not hesitate to contact us.

We hope to handle your contribution to Pharmaceuticals soon.

Editor-in-Chief
