Recent Advance in Oral Drug Delivery Development

Message from the Guest Editor

In recent years, the emergence of new technologies for oral delivery systems offers opportunities for patients to easily receive medications that were previously administered by injection, in particular. Hence, a new age of science and technology has emerged with the marketing of fast-dissolving drugs, self-emulsifying formulations that enhance the oral bioavailability of hydrophobic active compounds, osmotic devices for the controlled drug delivery independent upon gastrointestinal conditions, and vesicular systems that sustained drug delivery to a specific site. The journal Pharmaceuticals invites both reviews and original articles highlighting recent progress in the development of oral drug delivery. Topics include: new drug formulations, selective optimization device for oral drug bioavailability, investigation of innovative ways of getting oral formulations, beyond pharmaceuticals applications, oral drug delivery research. The collection of manuscripts will be published as a Special Issue of the journal.
